Sir John Holland Murderer

Killed a man in revenge for killing one of Sir John's men.

Was he within his rights to avenge the death of his best squire?

Sir John is the brother of the King - will this protect him? Should it?

William Burnley Coin Turner (Forger)

Forgery is the family business, he doesn't know how to do anything else.

He's got to feed his children some way. Everyone would do it if they could, it's not a "real" crime like murder, there's no blood on his hands. But is there any such thing as a victimless crime?

William Gervys Horse Thief

When on the run he asked for help from other churches and householders - do you think they helped him? They could have been in a lot of trouble if they helped a criminal.

Was he really stealing a horse or was it a mistake and he is innocent?

William Culyng Debtor

A hard working butcher, loved and respected in the community.

But has his kindness to his customers led him to be in debt himself and owe money to others who want to be paid back?

William Adamson Murder by Stabbing

He says he got into an argument, tried to reason his way out but the other man drew a dagger.

What was he to do but fight back? Was it murder, was it an accident, was it self defence?
